

HUMAN AND LABOUR RIGHTS POLICY

ALANNIA RESORTS respects and promotes the compliance with human and labour rights, interpreting them according to national and international laws and practices, in particular, with The Ten Principles of United Nations Global Compact, the OECD Guidelines and principles proclaimed by the International Labour Organization, serving as the main guideline for organizational management in all its interactions with employees, collaborators, guests, partners, suppliers and communities. ALANNIA RESORTS does not tolerate any form of harassment or discrimination based on race, gender, skin colour, religion, beliefs, political opinion, sexual orientation, nationality, geographical or ethnic origin, age, pregnancy or any other personal distinction, both physical and mental.

These are the principles of action that ensure fair labor practices and respect for human rights:

- Recruitment:
 - o Equal opportunities:
 - The criteria used for the selection, hiring and internal promotion of people will be made according to merits, effort, capacity, training, commitment and results. Whenever possible our employees will be offered the possibility of promotion.

- General working conditions:
 - o Training:
 - We offer employees internal and external training in different areas, pushing the updating of their knowledge and skills.
 - Online training will be promoted for better adaptation to the working day.
 - o Laboral relations and communication:
 - A TPN (job list) detailing the existing jobs in the organization, the coordination between them, the reporting lines and the specific roles and responsibilities associated with each job.
 - An open and participatory management model is developed, in which all the proposals of the workers for the improvement of the organization and the ethical commitment of the company are valued and taken into account. To this end, channels of communication and participation are kept open through which any professional or collaborator of the company can send their proposals for improvement to management.
 - Healthy living habits are promoted at all levels, so no work is allowed under the influence of alcohol or drugs, nor drug dealing.
 - A Conciliation Plan is available which sets out the effective measures to enable work-life reconciliation.
 - At the beginning of the employment relationship, disciplinary and complaint processes are communicated to all employees.
 - o Trade unions, associations and committees:
 - The Act allows staff to form groups with an elected representative to discuss labour issues and address them to management if they wish.
 - Membership of trade unions is permitted under the Act.
 - Meetings of trade unions, associations and committees may take place during working hours.
